COFFEE

COMPANY

Daughter of rural workers, she received from her father a small piece of land as a donation, and with her own initiative and labor, she planted her first coffee crop in 2005. Later, she got married and with her husband's help increased the production area, acquiring small plots and working as sharecroppers of neighbors. The property is run in an agricultural partnership system where three other families are involved.

It aims to produce specialty coffees in microlots.
